

The type of support you've been looking for.

For parents and caregivers of adults with intellectual or developmental disabilities, it can be challenging finding residential options for your loved one that provides the same high-quality, engaging support in the community that you can provide yourself.

GoodLife Innovations' Family Teaching Model offers comprehensive support in a community-based setting that is designed with the whole person in mind. Residents experience opportunities to learn independent living skills in an engaging and supportive environment with a consistent level of care.

PROVEN SERVICE MODELS

GoodLife's models of care are based on research supported by our partnership with The University of Kansas Applied Behavioral Sciences department and over 40 years of experience serving persons with disabilities.

We believe a life of dignity and independence is possible, no matter the challenge. The Family Teaching Model supports individuals with a variety of needs and offers extensive care oversight that improves quality of life, health, and well-being for every person served.

GoodLife empowers persons served with the support, services, and technology needed to thrive within the community.

Life Supported.

Experience "Life Supported" at GoodLife's Family Teaching Model. Support is provided by highly-trained staff dedicated to teaching independent living skills and providing engaging opportunities for meaningful community building.

GoodLife provides a level of care matched to each individual and considers the needs of every person as a whole.

FAMILY TEACHING HOMES

Family Teaching Model homes are primarily duplexes where the individual with disabilities lives in one side and staff lives in the other. Homes vary from location to location. We are happy to provide tours of homes in your area before making any decisions.

HOME LOCATIONS

Family Teaching Model homes are located in many of our service areas. Currently, we have homes located in Douglas, Johnson, and Allen counties.

What sets us apart:

Tech ENABLED SUPPORT

Family Teaching Homes utilize GoodLife's iLink Technology. Our smart-home technology provides remote coaching and support.

25 COMMUNITY HOURS

Our Family Teaching Model residents spend a minimum of 25 hours a week outside of the home participating in activities, attending Day Services or sightseeing.

40 YEARS OF EXPERIENCE

GoodLife's board is led by parents and guardians. Their leadership combined with our rich history means we understand the struggles adults with disabilities are facing.
